The Fruitful Years

"St. Catharines, Upper Canada", from an old sketch in the John Ross Robertson collection, Toronto Public Libraries. The view is from the south bank of Twelve Mile Creek.

● They have been very fruitful years—those years which have seen the steady, vigorous growth of St. Catharines.

For Nature has always smiled upon the rich land of which St. Catharines is the heart . . . and man's restless energy has wrought well.

As you turn back through time to the beginnings of the Garden City, you find, first, a settlement on the Banks of Twelve Mile Creek. You find it as the natural crossroads of Peninsular traffic.

And then you see the vigour of the pioneer driving a canal across the isthmus so ships of commerce could go from Lake Ontario up into Erie and on to the Upper Lakes. You see this growing traffic adding to the activity of the town. You see it growing—steadily—vigorously—till it becomes a centre of industry.

In a span of little more than a century you see the greatness of man's creative activity. You see the picture of what the will and vigour of Canadians have done. And you see, then, what great substance there really is behind those Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates you have stored away.

For the story of St. Catharines is essentially the story of Canada Unlimited. It is the story of a great past and an equally brilliant future.

What does he know about heating systems?

Not a thing, bless him. He has no heating-plant worries. If he's cold, he just squawks!

Most mothers feel much the same way. All they ask is a heating system that provides dependable, even, easily controlled warmth, regardless of weather.

So that leaves it up to The Man of the House. Fuel bills and repair bills are his headache. He's the party responsible for the proper care and feeding of the family furnace.

Fortunately, it's an easy chore provided you do two things before building your new home or replacing your present heating system: First, have a qualified Plumbing and Heating Contractor help you determine the best type of fuel and feed, decide on proper capacity and layout. Second, make up your mind to install Crane throughout: heating-unit, controls, piping, radiators. Getting it all from one responsible source pays off in long-run economy and living comfort. It keeps everybody happy.

Have your Plumbing and Heating Contractor show you how perfectly the Crane heating lines fit your heating plans.

Hail The Maccabees Of Our Day

Chanukah this year commences on the eve of November 29. With increased joy we shall observe the historic feast of the Maccabees this year for it is the first peacetime Chanukah when we behold the doom of the enemies of Israel and of human freedom.

As we recall what took place in ancient Palestine in the year 168 B.C.E., we become reminiscent of the guerilla warfare waged against the Nazis by the Maccabees of our day. The heroism of the underground movement against modern tyranny in Norway, Jugoslavia, Holland; the heroism of the Jews in the Warsaw ghetto. We think of the millions in the armed forces of the United Nations who engaged in the life and death struggle with the Nazi and Fascist beasts in six years of bloody war and at last wrested freedom from those tyrants who sought to enslave mankind.

The Maccabean war was not an end in itself. The Maccabees were not engaged in power-seeking or empire-building. The moment victory came and even before, they at once sought to rededicate the altar of the holy Temple and the people to God.

The great task for all great and small peoples now is to rekindle the lamps of civilization, decency, justice, and compassion. The United Nations' victory, like the Maccabean victory of an ancient day, has proven that tyranny is bankrupt and that humanity is solvent.

We must now, in the spirit of the Maccabees, rebuild the cities destroyed in this war. Certainly, we must give of our substance to aid the remnants of our people and all suffering people. We must rehabilitate them.

Primarily, Chanukah symbolizes the struggle for religious freedom. The Maccabees, as the Jewish tradition, interpreted the victory, not as military or political, but as religious.

Fighting as we do today for Jewish statehood, and that light in Jewish Palestine must be won as a necessity, our historic place in the world, we must bear in mind, is primarily of religious significance and purport. Through us, the Jewish people, has been revealed to the world the moral law. Empires and small nations can exist in freedom side by side when the moral law is established in the world. International peace is anchored in religion. It finds inspiration in the great religious dogma of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

For 2200 years we Jews have observed this beautiful festival of Chanukah. Through the dark centuries we kindled the Chanukah lights hoping for the establishment of universal freedom.

We hail the modern Maccabees, the forces of freedom who in our day have vindicated humanity. Thus, with new joy, we light the tapers and sing the stirring festival hymns.

Will our generation prove worthy of the newly-won freedom at such great sacrifice? Can we truly go from victory into genuine world peace? If Chanukah 5706 is to shed the new light of world brotherhood through the dark present manifestations of imperialism, national sovereignty and power politics must vanish, and all peoples must dedicate themselves to build the world altar of world government and world brotherhood.

"Where Judah's faithful sons are found
Though few their numbers be,
Though foes oppress, let songs resound
Our fathers' God, to Thee.
"Hear, brothers mine, where'er ye dwell,
This truth our prophets told:
God will your foemen's wrath dispel
If to your faith ye hold.
"O let our hymns to heaven arise
In strains of love and peace
Brave souls yield not to tears and sighs
Their songs of hope ne'er cease.
"Faith of our fathers, living still
In spite of fire and sword,
Thy songs sublime our hearts shall thrill
To hope in Israel's Lord."

Brotherhood In Religion And Through Religion

It was our privilege to participate in the Religion and Life Parley sponsored by the University of Vermont. We were a member of a group of religious leaders which was invited by the University to come to the campus and talk "with" the students and not "to" the students about the things nearest their hearts, relating these questions to a religious foundation or background.

In the team of religious leaders were also Rev. Michael Ahern, S.J., of Weston College, Weston, Mass.; the Rev. Reinn D. Hyson, Congregational Christian Churches minister to students; and the Rev. Ben Richardson, formerly associate Pastor of the First Abyssinian Church, Harlem, and now editor of The Protestant magazine.

The writer set many conferences on the general forum discussions dealing with religion's "Part in World Reconstruction" and "What is the Chance of Brotherhood in America?" but was accorded the honor of preaching the sermon Sunday at Vespers in the beautiful University Chapel. And of course there was a number of Round Table discussions on Monday.

I found the Parley on Religion and Life a most stimulating experience of benefit to students, professors and religious leaders. The very appearance of a Jewish Rabbi, Roman Priest, Protestant Minister and a Negro Minister on the same university platform in the cause of religion must have contributed to the greater unity of religious fellowship and the urgency can there be demonstrated in religion so that the world may find brotherhood through religion.

Where There Is No God

By Joseph Klausner, Professor of Modern Hebrew Literature, Hebrew University, Palestine

The atrocities perpetrated upon ... Jews by the Nazis wherever ... latter seized power are so up... ...zing that the normal mind simp... cannot apprehend them. Hence ... is not strange that at first the ... of horror were not believed ... and were regarded as mere war ... atrocity propaganda. But we ... also no longer console our... ...selves with such vain comfort ... unfortunate witnesses testify t... ... torture and massacre of Jews ... a scale that overshadows even ... atrocities of Attila, king of the ... Huns, and of Genghis Khan, king ... the Mongols.

The very fact that cities like ... Warsaw and Odessa, Vilna and ... Lodz, which there had been ... great Jewish communities of tens ... of hundreds of thousands of ... souls, were found without a single ... Jew when retaken by the Russians ... this surely has spoken as eloquently as a hundred witnesses ... to the only deeds of horror more appalling than any that had ever been committed at any time or in any place could have wiped out the Jews in territories like Poland proper, Galicia and Volhynia ... were hundreds of cities and ... towns that had had absolute Jewish majorities or at least large Jewish minorities.

What is the source of the ... "unheard-of inhumanity"? In order ... to kill millions of children, women ... and old men by burning them down ... by bullets suffocating them in ... gas cells and destroying them in ... huge crematories, it is obvious ... that the torturers required hecatombs ... of thousands of men for the consummation of these crimes. How did ... it happen that in this day and ... age there could be found in a civilized country like that of the Germans tens of thousands of cruel executioners who spared neither women nor babes nor greybeards?

... many of us knew the Germans before the two world wars? Were on the one hand, they were ... a "people of poets and philosophers," as they described themselves and mistook others into describing them, on the other they were by no means friends out of ... Jews. They were no better than other people—and no worse. There were always many anti-Semites in their midst; but one must ask: in what country and in the midst of what nation have there never been anti-Semites? When and where in the course of two dark millennia ... the Jews not been deprived of their rights? When and where ... they not been subjected to persecutions? When and where have they not been murdered and despised? How few the nations that ... not bathed in Jewish blood! ... are told that Friedrich Nietzsche was the cause of it all. ... he taught that all things were permitted to him who aspires to become a "superman". And since ... Germans looked upon themselves as the "super-nation" which is destined to achieve world domination, all things are permitted them.

Yet it is not possible that ... such philosopher, were he the most original of thinkers, could change the character of a whole people. And even Nietzsche though he condemned the "slave morality" of the Prophets and of Socrates as well spoke highly of the Jews as a people and praised the Jewish Scriptures warmly in contrast to his dislike of the Christian New Testament. But where are there signs that this favorable attitude of Nietzsche exerted any influence upon the Germans? Why, have the disciples of Nietzsche singled out the Jews and their Torah as their chief victims? Generally speaking it can hardly be claimed that Nietzsche's ideas gained any great currency among the masses of the German people.

It seems to me that the answer to the question posed here—how ... civilized people could be guilty of such deeds of horror—is to be found in quite a different sphere. In the masses of the German people and not only of the German people who have lost their God. And where there is no God, all things are lawful and all things are permissible.

In a Russian novel by Zeev Jabotinsky entitled "They Five", the disintegration of a Jewish family is portrayed. Towards the end of the book the husband and father finds the "Enemy of the family" in bed with his wife and daughter at the same time, a most vile and twofold transgression: adultery and incest! The husband reproaches ed the "ground" with his business: how could he bring himself to do anything so unwholesome? But the latter replies calmly, "But why, why, why is it forbidden?"

We too ask: "Actually, why is it forbidden?" Again is the ban of religion that forbids it; but those who do not believe in God has no respect for the dictates of religion. There is also the ban of society; but as the majority of individuals, in this day and age, already flout the laws of society? Is not our society in general composed of individuals who transgress its laws and customs? Finally, the State declares such things to be unlawful. But here the difficulty arises that what is banned in one country is lawful in another. History makes it clear to us that all such variable and fortuitous distinctions.

For example, in our age a modern mind maintains in regard to an abomination. Yet the ancient civilized Greeks of antiquity considered the marriage of brother and sister as entirely natural and Pharaoh [illegible] Likewise, there is still no moral reason why a man cannot marry and his sister-in-law. Queen Victoria and though the ancient Egyptians were also a highly civilized people their Pharaohs were in the habit of marrying their own daughters. In many also we have seen there is good reason to ask "Why, actually, is it forbidden?" While there is no God and we have no God, everything is lawful, because everything becomes relative. What is forbidden today was lawful in ancient times and what is lawful in modern States was lawful in ancient Egypt or Greece.

This view, which was already held by the ancient Greek Sophists is [illegible] also, has been preached in millions of books and essays since the early days of the Renaissance by tens of thousands of writers [illegible]. Skepticism, philosophic and moral modes of thought of [illegible] and books and [illegible] our own day. Surely, [illegible] for hundreds of years in every form of literature all over the world must finally penetrate even the lowest ranks of society.

"For the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth". The animal in man is large and powerful. The beast is always ready to burst forth and vent whatever the occasion, the stimulus, and the pretext are provided. In the Middle Ages and later, religion was both the occasion and the stimulus for mass slaughter. The destruction of the Albigenses, the vast cruelties of the Inquisition, the massacre of St. Bartholomew, of the Crusades and of Bogdan Chmielnicky in the Ukraine (1648), all these things were done in the name of God. If a heretic recanted or a Jew turned apostate their sins were forgiven them forthwith. In the name of God the greatest enormities were committed. Lactantius Firmianus complained of this even in his day. But in the name of God, also, slaves were obedient. Many a crime was not committed for "fear of God". It was enough to remind a religious man (and who was not religious as security as there communities apart) of the commandment to "beat the lord thy God" when he had lifted his fist to strike, his hand would shrivel that very instant.

Nowadays the fear of God is no more. Exact science and superficial atheism have (particularly during the past two centuries) undermined faith in the forces that are exalted above Nature. Modern education also promotes this process. The creative and fertile imagination of the child, which enhances and enriches the soul, is not developed. "Enlightened" teachers think it proper to suppress the child's imagination and to stimulate the intellectual activity of the still undeveloped brain at a very tender age. Such "progressive" teachers rob the child of God and angels, of heaven and heaven's gates, of the legendary matters of the creation and of the wonderful mysteries of the soul. Therefore punishes the child here and there with a book which makes it clear to him that in the place of God and Heaven there is nothing but cold atmosphere and empty space. It then "becomes clear" to him that all that has been thought on these subjects by scholars and that is still thought today by many people is only a "silly fable" and a "foolish legend." Hence it follows that, "actually, everything is permissible". Neither religion nor society have the power to prevent misdeeds, and if the State enacts no penalties for them, why should they not be committed?

Accordingly, where the State permits and not only permits, but commands and urges the plunder of Jewish property and the extermination of a whole people, why should not tens of thousands of individuals, educated and simple alike, do these things? What is to deter them?

And not only the Germans have plundered and killed. The smaller nations, also— the Rumanians, the Hungars, the Slovaks, the Ukrainians, the Lithuanians, the Latvians—have robbed and murdered, tortured and tormented. But the

Zionists Of U.S. And Britain Bitterly Condemn New Palestine Policy

A statement welcoming closer cooperation by the United States in solving the problems of Palestine but emphatically condemning the plan for a joint inquiry announced by Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Great Britain and President Truman was issued in New York on November 14 by Dr. Abba Hillel Silver and Dr. Stephen S. Wise, joint chairmen of the American Zionist Emergency Council.

The British Labor party has abandoned its earlier support for a Jewish national home in Palestine, and the United States, in appointing to the inquiry, has "fallen into a carefully prepared trap," the statement declared. Nothing but delay can come from such an investigation, whereas the need is for immediate action to aid the displaced and helpless Jews of Europe, Dr. Silver and Dr. Wise continued.

The statement follows:

(1) The statement by Foreign Secretary Bevin, yesterday, on Palestine and on Jewish emigration from Europe brings to a climax the self-stultification and the betrayal of pledges which have characterized the policy of the British Labor Government on the Palestine issue since its assumption of office.

(2) As recently as April 1945 the National Executive Committee of the British Labor party reaffirmed its support for the Jewish national home in the following terms:

"There is surely neither logic nor reasoning in a Jewish national home unless we are prepared to let the Jews, if they wish, enter this tiny land in such numbers as to become a majority. There was a strong case for this before the war, and there is an irresistible case for it now."

This may be compared with Mr. Bevin's misleading remark when dealing with this issue yesterday:

"If the Jews with all their sufferings want to get to the head of the queue, you have the danger of another anti-Semitic reaction through it all."

(3) Instead of carrying out its unequivocal commitments, the Labor Government has sought in every way to procrastinate and to avoid the fulfillment of its pledges.

(4) In this policy of delay it has now succeeded in enlisting the inadvertent support of the President of the United States. By agreeing to the proposal for a joint Anglo-American Committee of Inquiry the United States Government has fallen into a carefully prepared trap.

(5) In his letter to Mr. Attlee of Aug. 31, 1945, the President stated on the basis of the investigation conducted at his direction by Earl G. Harrison, that the main solution for the non-repatriable Jews of Europe was the quick evacuation of those who wished it to Palestine. "If it is to be effective," wrote Mr. Truman, "such action should not be long delayed," and he urged the immediate grant of 100,000 immigration certificates to Palestine.

Instead of according to this request the British Government bowed it aside by the proposal for a joint Anglo-American Committee of Investigation. President Truman now states that he continues to adhere to the views expressed in his letter to Mr. Attlee. But in acceptance of the British scheme with its provision for a paltry 1,500 certificates per month until such time as the Committee issues its recommendations, represents a complete recession from his original position.

(6) The possibilities of Jewish emigration to countries other than Palestine were exhaustively explored at international conference at Bermuda and at Evian in 1938 and 1938, and the results were nil. The Intergovernmental Committee of Refugees, further, has been in existence for years with a large staff and with a large budget. The outstanding result of the inquiry of the Jews of Europe to emigrate to Palestine is established by the reports of Mr. Harrison, of Judge Hutcheson and of Mr. Gibson of the Red Cross, but by every authentic observer. In these circumstances, the appointment of another committee of inquiry is a mockery. Instead of concrete measures in conformity with clearly defined and valid international agreements, the Jews of Europe are again to be treated to empty words while, physically and spiritually, they rot and perish. The President has come an unfortunate to the cause of saving the Jews of Europe by separating it from the Jewish Wish. With postponement upon postponement, any possibility of [illegible] of Jewish [illegible] and any [illegible] of the [illegible] of His Majesty's Government with regard to the establishment of the Jewish national home. such schools. Should the public school authorities refuse to grant the use of the public school buildings for this purpose, a suitable building should be secured and equipped for the purpose.

Such schools would be run at a minimum expense to the community. Teachers would be obtained from the ranks of the professional Jewish community and also from the ranks of Jewish students who have graduated from the High Schools and Collegiate Institutes. Such schools would be open every afternoon and evening, and also on Saturday afternoons. Pupils would be encouraged to attend regularly by the granting of prizes and certificates of merit.

Such schools would be open every afternoon and evening, and also on Saturday afternoons. Pupils would be encouraged to attend regularly by the granting of prizes and certificates of merit.

Another scheme which would be an improvement on the Community Schools as at present conducted would be an application of the "Settlement" idea. As in connection with the Community Schools, the Settlement would have to be connected with the life of these large centres of Canadian Jewry in about 1,000,000 numbers, each member paying yearly membership fee about $3 (special students' and women's rates are feasible). From this fund about four-fifths entertaining Jewish concerts and theatrical performances, films, art exhibitions, lectures on Jewish civilization would be had every season. A building would serve as an instrument for information and inspiration to the members. Such an organization would not need a building of its own (except an office) but could use the facilities of its respective city. Under capable leadership and with artistic planning this organization might considerably increase the appreciation and fostering of Jewish culture and bring to this country Jewish artists of world renown. The fixed membership would secure a certain financial stability, obviate the risks of commercially managed concerts, and even facilitate experiments with new ways in Jewish culture.

A [illegible] Chair of Jewish [illegible] important and successful in the United States and in England [illegible] probably more difficult in universities in countries of more recent Jewish settlement; are there not Jewish students at universities throughout Canada who are in a position to make a gift for such a purpose? Is there not a wealthy Jew who would like to endow such a chair in memory of his father or mother?

Another scheme might be that of a community [illegible] Jewish Institute of about 1,000,000 members

The Jewish Problem: Judaism

By [illegible], Rabbi of Anshe Shalom Congregation, of Hamilton, Ontario

I. Recently I was asked a question pertaining to the very core of that complex subject known as "the Jewish problem". It was a challenging question, for there are few things more unwelcome than questions leading not even to an understanding of the problem which they purport to be solving. The question was as follows: "What is there in Judaism which would justify the continuance of Jewish existence in view of the unspeakable suffering it has received at all times and above all [illegible]?"

At this point the reader will probably have the feeling of a [illegible]. He may not even read any further. For is it not well known even to the least informed Jew that the "Jewish problem" has nothing whatever to do with Judaism? That how the Jew interprets his existence that the ideals of [illegible] determine his way of life is a matter of complete irrelevance as far as the "Jewish problem" is concerned? Do we not hear from both learned professors and informed leaders readily as well and loudly what the "Jewish problem" is namely, intolerance and discrimination, persecution and homelessness? Do we not know all about its causes, namely, the prejudices of the ignorant and the machinations of the unscrupulous? And are not the remedies clearly in sight as aims of all our endeavours namely, education of the ignorant and battle to the [illegible]?

Yes, of course we know all this and it is as clear as the sun that these concepts are correct, these programs to be implemented, aims and programs evolved in decades of unspeakable agony for mankind. They are our daily thoughts and time after time every Jew must be concerned in earnest earnest with the salvation of the remnants of European Jewry, and with permanent measures everywhere in its sense, not only for the sake of security or [illegible], but for the sake of mankind itself.

The point is however that all this is not the essence of the Jewish problem. Overcome all prejudice and persecute with all the vociferation, humour and theoretic [illegible] conditions many there undoubtedly would be [illegible]. It has for two world wars [illegible] and still [illegible] Jewish problem.

In the above [illegible] all the [illegible] will have [illegible] be [illegible] a [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] will [illegible] [illegible] Jewish problem [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

ORT Tools From Montreal And What They Will Mean To Displaced Jews In Europe

By Suzanne F. Cohen

The Canadian ORT Organization Tool Supply Exhibition is being held, appropriately, in the auditorium of the Workmen's Circle Centre, 4848 St. Lawrence Boulevard, in Montreal. On display are various types of tools and machinery, and woodwork, most of which is being shipped to Europe to help train and equip displaced persons. All the work was done in the shop, at 257 Craig Street West, in Montreal, under Vladimir Grossman, executive director.

The ORT (Organization for Rehabilitation through Training) showed tools for bricklaying, for instance; for machine trades; and for intricate machine-shop work; and also examples of steel-lathe work. The new wood-working shop, installed recently, was represented by wood-lathe work, and benchwork such as shelves, small square looms and inkle-looms, one of the simplest looms to handle, and used mostly for weaving scarves and belts.

When the exhibition opened, uniformed soldiers in the Ordnance Corps were walking around, picking up tools happily, and examining them. Self-avowed machinists, including those not even connected with the ORT, were offering comment on the supplies, and explaining their use to anyone who inquired.

One of the ORT guides was Reubin Pecarve, who was picked as a representative pupil. He is fifteen years old, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sol Pecarve, 4215 St. Urbain Street. He has been a student at the ORT shop for over a year, working on a wood-lathe and on engines, and his sister, Edith, used to work in the ORT office. He is there from ten to five o'clock, every day, and is a slight, tall, alert boy, who was anxious to show people around and explain all the intricacies and functions of steel tools. His parents were there, and although the science of machine tools was probably opened up a new world for them, they were full of pride and radiant as if they understood everything, too.

[illegible] of the interested private communications and delighted to explain [illegible] the tools were made, was Bill Isaacs, formerly of the [illegible] Lancaster, now Flight-Lieut. Bill [illegible] a [illegible] low [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

MILK

the most nearly perfect food

The comparatively new science of dietetics is placing more and more stress on the necessity of milk as an essential food for both children and adults. For milk uniquely combines, in easily digestible form, the proteins, minerals and vitamins required for building bone and muscle, for renewing energy and warding off infection. Thus Dominion Dairies serve a vital need and constantly growing demand by delivering daily to thousands of Canadian homes milk, cream and other dairy products the quality of which is scrupulously guarded.

ISN'T IT THE TRUTH? By R-Jos

UNCLE FRED, DO YOU THINK JOE'S GOING TO FEEL LET DOWN WHEN HE GETS HOME?
YES, I'M AFRAID HE WILL, A LITTLE!
DID YOU, AFTER THE LAST WAR?
I THINK WE ALL DID.
BUT WEREN'T YOU GLAD TO BE BACK?
SURE! BUT REMEMBER, HOME HAD SEEMED AND IT WASN'T!
NOT BY A LONG SHOT! NO HOME IS.
BUT YOUR AUNT AND I WORKED OUR PROBLEMS OUT TOGETHER... THEY'RE MUCH EASIER THAT WAY. YOU AND JOE TRY THAT... YOU'LL FIND IT WORKS!

REUNION IN CANADA!

How many of us are making happy plans for when our men come back. And maybe the reality won't quite live up to expectations. But the awakening doesn't have to be too rude. Everyone will need a little adjusting . . . So, let's plan to work out our problems together!

think, because a people of its own kind, just as they would not have attempted such a people if their circumstances had compelled with disregard of human dignities and of no through history. The point is that it was their faith which made them resist these demands. To interpret the resistance of the Maccabees in terms of national pride and self-preservation, or of the desire for personal and economic advantage is sheer nonsense. After all, what, in terms of mere preservation of nation, was to be gained by refusing to partake of pork, a mere symbol of the acceptance of what was universally accepted? What, in those terms, was to be lost by worshipping on the altars of the pagans, an act symbolizing not more than a compromise with personal conduct?

The other fact is that we are what we are by reason of the faith of our fathers, a faith making them feel that loyalty to it was a duty even if it involved sacrifice, and that it was well worth while to be true to that duty no matter what the cost. And it is a no less clear fact that unless we find our way to a faith which makes an absolute Jewish existence as at least worth while if not as our duty, our Jewish existence will have no basis and no backbone, whether the circumstances in which we live are happy or adverse. And it is difficult to close one's eyes to the fact that to that end, either of loss, Jewish existence will be doomed.

4. In an attempt to outline, in it ever so preliminary and inadequate, what there is in Judaism that can be a stay of life for the Jew of our day, our first point must be this: if it was ever worth while for the Jew to live Judaism, it is worth while today; if in our day the Jewish people have no further justification for remaining a unique people, they never had. Humbly we do consider our fathers not only as justified in defying the adversaries to disolve, persecuted time and again, but we glorify them for it. Not only we do, in what might be mostly misdirected national pride, the world does.

By their persistence, it is said, they gave the Bible to the world, with its message of social justice and brotherly love, of the One God and His kingdom. If this is so, if it was their stubborn survival which made these a blessing, — and we do not claim at this point that it is so — what on earth makes us believe that our age is in no need of every single individual and people willing and able to provide positively the blessing of mak- ing that message real? What on earth makes us believe that it is not necessary to promulgate the vision of the kingdom of God today?

Surely not the assumption that we have come sufficiently close to the days of the Messiah! No, it is hardly that. Rather is it an opinion which has done irreparable harm to the causes of both Christianity and Judaism, especially in the last few decades: the absurd idea that to know an ideal of a faith is identical with its realization.

Merely because the knowledge of the Bible and its values has become part of all Western civilization we sit back complacently, convinced of the superiority of our age to those of the past. But while ideas become, in steady evolution, the permanent possession of subsequent generations, their realization is an ever-new challenge to every generation. The bloodshed and barbarism of our time cry out to us to stop being self-satisfied with the possessions which we consider as the birthright of the son of the twentieth century, and humbly begin instead to acquire what has been handed down to us.

But our young generation which has grown up in the turmoil of the twentieth century has already given up that complacency which is more characteristic of the nineteenth century. What is it that blinds them to the truth? They, too, have not fully rid themselves of the sins of the fathers. They do see the need for the world to be improved through humble effort, but to do it by devotion to an ancient faith, this is something that seems absurd to their modern intelligence.

Do we not know nowadays that the world is moved not by ideas but by economic and political circumstances? Are not ideologies merely superstructures of social systems; ethical ideas merely rationalizations of class-interests; clergymen of all religions merely the instruments of some economic power? What foolish blindness, to be explained only by our arrogance in our technical achievements!

How can anyone fail to see in this twentieth century that if it is true that economic and political circumstances influence ideas, it is a hundred times true that ideas influence economic and political circumstances. How can anyone today ignore the fact that because there is a spiritual vacuum in the minds and consciences of men that demonic ideas have gained a foothold in the minds of millions of them rendering them willing to starve and die for the kingdom of evil?

It would be tragic, indeed, if even at this late hour we did not realise that, with all our technical and organisational skill, we shall not succeed in bringing balm to the wounds of a generation crying out for a better world, if we do not do our utmost to arouse a burning faith in this generation, a faith making them feel that it is worth while and a sacred duty to remain devoted to the ideal envisaged even through sacrifice and tragedy.

5. Yes, no one in his senses can doubt the vital need of those indubitable truths and values which form part of Judaism. The question still is: does the truest devotion to them consist in stubbornly remaining a people apart, and, for that matter, was this ever the truest devotion to them? Have there not been numerous occasions when, in living Judaism, the Jew should have submerged himself in love of mankind, thus taking the first step toward a world in which there would be no difference between "Jew and Gentile, slave and free man?" And if it was not done before, is not this the time to do it?

Those Jews who held that view in the past, and those who hold it today should be considered with sincere understanding. In advocating the dissolution of the Jews, they are often motivated by the ideals of Judaism. They wish to speed the days of the Messiah; they seek a short-cut to the kingdom of God. But they must learn time and again, often by tragic experience, that there is no short-cut to salvation. In its most profound perspective, history is neither a process of continuous evolution from ape to superman nor a struggle for survival in a see-saw of the machinations of classes, nations and civilizations; it is an ever-new constellation of factors, an ever-new complication of situations determined by the eternal tension between finite human effort and the ideal of perfection.

Just as it is impossible for anyone to evade that tension by ignoring that ideal which by its unceasing efficacy makes history human history, so it is impossible to evade the tension by trying to leap straight into the ideal ever-envisaged. He who attempts it pays for it with disillusion. In the past, the rabbis would forbid speculation concerning the date of the arrival of the Messiah; today, we must warn him who for the sake of Judaism would dissolve the Jews that he will achieve the opposite of what he desires.

History inexorably faces us with this situation: if you dissolve a specific religion in order to achieve greater universality, you merely water down its message, and you have mankind divided not as much as, but more than, before, because the positive, moral, humanitarian force this religion represented is no more. In its beginnings Christianity's foremost problem was expansion; ever since it has been that of remaining Christianity. In voluntarily dissolving themselves the Jews would certainly not hasten the day of the Messiah. And they would postpone it, if Judaism in the hands of the Jews can be a force of value for the spiritual life of mankind today.

5. Having arrived at this point, how can we fail to see that we as Jews living Judaism can have a mighty mission in our time? Yes, a mission, and let who will object. In using this word we do not think of being better than or privileged over anyone else, nor do we in the least imply that there is not a mission for every single human being on earth every bit as noble as ours: we think simply of a job crying to be done. In a tear-stained world we hear the ancient words: "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" And we say the ancient words: "Here am I; send me".

On Israel the pagan fury of the oppressors has concentrated in their efforts to establish the kingdom of hatred, oppression and sheer might. We do not know why it was only after such tragic suffering that the devices of evil were brought to naught. We do not know why Israel was to bleed of so many wounds. What we do know with greater certainty than anything else is that history has no status, life no meaning, without that vision of perfection affecting all history. Judaism's vision of brotherhood and love, of justice and peace, of a generation beating their swords into ploughshares and their spears into pruning-hooks. Evil has caused the wounds of the Jewish people of our day. Let the weakened in body arise in mighty strength of soul to live as a glowing prophecy of the kingdom of God which no reign of evil can eradicate.

Is this really the question? Whether it is worth while to accept suffering in the service of the Jewish faith in the kingdom of God? Is not this the question: whether it is worth while to live in our time without such a faith and without such a devotion?

ZIONISTS OF U.S.

Jewish purchase of land in Palestine and the limitation of Jewish immigration to a trickle. All this despite the fact that the party of which Mr. Bevin is a leader in 1939 condemned the White Paper policy as a "cynical breach of pledges given to the Jews and the world, including America"; and despite the express statement by Herbert Morrison, now Lord President of the Council, that that policy would not be automatically binding upon the successors of the Chamberlain Government.

(8) Finally, we must point out that the President of the United States has associated this country with a committee of inquiry whose conclusions have already, in important respects, been determined in advance by the British Foreign Secretary. In spite of the unequivocal commitments of our Government and people to the reestablishment of Palestine as a Jewish Commonwealth; in spite of the statements of President Wilson, of Prime Minister David Lloyd George, of Winston Churchill, of General Smuts and others at the time of the Balfour Declaration that what was contemplated was the ultimate establishment in Palestine of a Jewish State, the British Foreign Secretary has already declared that the establishment of Palestine as a Jewish State is precluded. Mr. Bevin has further prejudged the issue by declaring that Palestine cannot, by itself, "provide sufficient opportunity for grappling with the problems" of the surviving Jews of Europe — a conclusion which is in diametrical conflict with authoritative investigations, such as those of Dr. Walter Clay Lowdermilk of the United States Department of Agriculture. Mr. Bevin's statement, further, altogether ignores the fact that, as was stated by the British Royal Commission on Palestine, "unquestionably the primary purpose of the Palestine Mandate was the establishment of the Jewish national home."

(9) The closer cooperation of our own country with Great Britain in the settlement of the problem of Jewish national homelessness and of Palestine is warmly to be welcomed, but we deeply deplore the form which this co-operation has taken. It is with the utmost regret that we charge our Government with having allowed itself to be involved in a procedure whose main purpose is delay where action is long overdue.

We desire to draw attention, further, to the fact that the terms of reference of the proposed Joint Committee omit all mention of the basic commitments of the British Government in regard to the reconstitution of the Jewish national home in accordance with the Balfour Declaration and the Palestine Mandate. Under no circumstances can this committee be allowed under the guise of an impartial inquiry to stifle the agonized cries of the surviving Jews of Europe and to undermine and eventually destroy the rights of the Jewish people to Palestine, internationally guaranteed by fifty-two nations of the world, including the United States of America.

Hadassah, women's Zionist organization, issued a sharp attack upon Foreign Secretary Bevin for his support of a Joint Anglo-American inquiry in Palestine and his recent speech on Palestinian problems in the House of Commons after a meeting of the organization's national board at headquarters, 1819 Broadway, New York.

A statement expressing the views of the board was sent by airmail or wire to Hadassah's 700 chapters in the forty-eight states. It declared that Mr. Bevin's comment was an "insulting, provocative and dangerously hostile attack on the Jewish people, the Zionist movement and the honor and prestige of the British Government."

Professed British concern for the attitude of Moslems is negatived by British actions in the Netherland East Indies where the Moslem population is being subdued in the interest of Netherland imperialism, the statement added.

The World Jewish Congress, after a meeting of the executive committee to discuss the statements of Mr. Bevin, declared that it had noted "with surprise and regret" Mr. Bevin's distinction between Zionists and Jewry as a whole.

"The World Jewish Congress, speaking for Jewish communities and organizations in more than thirty countries and expressing what is without question the attitude of the great majority of the Jews of the world, completely repudiates the existence of any such distinction," the committee said.

Despite its "obvious sugar-coated camouflage," the Bevin policy on Palestine "will be branded by all right-thinking people as one of the most shameful betrayals in history," Col. Morris J. Mandelsohn, president of the New Zionist Organization of America, said in a statement issued on behalf of the national executive committee of the organization.

The policy of delay involved in the proposed Anglo-American inquiry directly contravenes Anglo-American policy in Syria and Lebanon, where immediate action was taken to meet recent unrest, despite the protests of a large Christian and Jewish minority in Syria and the protests of a Christian majority in Lebanon, the statement declared.

The full force of Zionist opposition to Great Britain's newly declared policy for Palestine was let loose on November 14 by David Ben Gurion, chairman of the executive committee of the Jewish agency. He condemned Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin's statement as a "sad disappointment and shock" that prejudged the findings of the Joint Inquiry Commission.

Mr. Ben Gurion, influential leader of the Labor section of the Zionist Organization, said at a press conference that British and American members of the committee were already arranging to leave for Jerusalem for an emergency meeting to determine the official policy in the light of Mr. Bevin's statement. Mr. Bevin prejudged the commission's works, Mr. Ben Gurion charged, by asserting that Palestine "cannot provide a sufficient opportunity for grappling with the whole (Jewish) problem."

The executive committee of the Labor party will meet soon to discuss Mr. Bevin's statement. A large section of the committee, which is mainly pro-Zionist, has recently been highly critical of Mr. Bevin's handling of Palestine, but Prof. Harold Laski, chairman of the committee and leader of the critics, gave strong support on November 14 to the Foreign Secretary's statement, says the New York Times.

"I think the policy opens a way which may, with good fortune, lead to a permanent solution" Professor Laski said. "However, I would like

EWING'S COFFEE

It perks you up!

Rich, fragrant, satisfying — your family deserves coffee made with Ewing's. Good grocers sell it in 1 lb. and ½ lb. vacuum packed tins, like all Ewing's Fine Foods, something of the experience and knowledge gained in helping housewives during 100 years, is reflected in its extra quality and value.

"This is really the crux of the problem: Are the Jews to remain a minority in Palestine as they are throughout the world? We firmly believe that history has decreed that we should cooperate with Great Britain, but the British people must realize that the Jews of Palestine and the millions outside who have set their hearts on Palestine will never agree that the return of the Jews to their historic homeland should be dependent on anyone else's consent; that the Jews in Palestine should remain a minority and that they should be deprived of statehood."

Only 140 Jews were among the 5,000 repatriates from the Soviet Union to Poland, which seems to indicate that the majority of Polish Jews prefer to remain in Soviet Russia rather than return to Poland.

WHERE THERE IS NO GOD

[illegible] Germany with their disparagement [illegible] and their exact scientific methods, have surpassed all the others in village and slaughter. The very superiority of their civilization [illegible] transformed into a menace, for they excelled in anything beyond all their contemporaries. They have no fear of God, but they deny His existence, and the State and the Fuehrer may have supplanted Him in Germany, but only by the most brutal physical force.

There can be no denying that the hand of the religious man of love and kindness in these terrible days, the picture of Jeremiah and Habakkuk are more poignant than ever. Why has God brought such terrible trials and afflictions upon the people and is such question the message? Wherefore hast Thou given them over to such cruelty, and indeed His anger when the wicked destroyeth the man that is more righteous than he? And wherefore dost Thou make us as the fishes of the sea, as the creeping things that have no ruler over them?

Where is the God of justice at a time when millions of Jews are murdered and enslaved and hatred glares from the face of white peoples at human misery? Where public and private, pious men and saints who have drawn support from the study of the Torah and the performance of good deeds? Have we sinned more grossly than other peoples have we transgressed more than they? "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth." But to such extremes? Even to the massacre of millions of infants? Can it be the God of Israel, whose compassion was stirred for the "sinful" cattle of Nineveh, the destroyer of Sennacherib?

All these bitter and searching questions give the religious man no rest, and at times cause him even to rebel against his own faith and against his God. The simple piety of our fathers is no more. It is therefore difficult for us to accept

We have seen what happened to [illegible] when they left God out of their lives. We have seen what happened to [illegible] when they left God out of their lives. We have seen what happened to [illegible] when they left God out of their lives.

True we can hardly return to the days of God when were held by our fathers and which are still held by the masses of the Jewish and other peoples, but the God who is "true and fast," who is "merciful and gracious," on the one hand and "jealous and revengeful" on the other; this "God of the battle of all flesh," who is also the God of history, the ruler of the generations, the warrior of nations and states; this God who is at once spiritual and active, yet who is not corporeal, and has no form or shape whatsoever—such a God is a world force, who commands all forces within Himself and is not commanded contrarily by them. Who is the supreme element and who is the substance of all that exists; this God has not become superfluous even for his cruel and materialistic generation, perhaps in particular for this generation. Without Him not only would the world be empty, but the heart of mankind would dry up. In a humanity without God and without a human heart, would there be anything that was not permissible? By what would it live? And why should it not destroy itself when it recognized no landmarks, Divine or human?

Would it not be well for Hitlerism, Hitlerism and the rest of the "freethinkers" to give thought to this question?

This article is from the Jewish Exponent.

ORT Tools

simak men, who come down if there are openings and available space; and students who are going to school in the day-time.

On the opening night, Louis Fitch, K.C., of Montreal, president of Canadian ORT, was chairman of a group of speakers. With him on the platform, were: Edward Wexham, president of the school committee; Saul Hayes, executive director of the Canadian Jewish Congress, representing the United Jewish Refugee and War Relief Agencies, affiliated with Congress; Michael Rabinovitch, a board member; Major Ian Hamilton, of Ottawa, Director of physical fitness for Canada, of the Department of Health and Welfare; and Colonel P. L. Browne, of Ottawa, director of voluntary war relief of the Department of National War Services; and the two principal speakers, both of New York, Mrs. Alexander Dubovitz, vice-president of the American Women's ORT; and Murray Lavine, who is chairman of the ORT executive committee, and secretary of the World ORT Union, which has its headquarters in Paris.

Mr. Fitch, in introducing the speakers, said that ORT tools have gone to Poland, Africa, and Switzerland, and that organizations like UNRRA, the Joint Distribution Committee, and the Quakers' Relief Organization tell the ORT that their tools form the most important way of helping displaced persons, even more important than food or clothing. He said that the ORT tries to equip people, not only to teach them to make a living with their hands, but also to make them better citizens in their own countries, and in countries to which they may emigrate.

Colonel Browne, the first speaker, expressed the contemporary "cold-help" view of welfare effort, when he told the meeting that he was "very, very much impressed by the work being done . . . It is one thing to hand out soup-kitchen relief, but it is another thing to teach a man how to work."

Mr. Hayes, following him, presented a concise picture of displaced Europeans today. He believes that unless the Intergovernmental Committee on Refugees finds a solution quickly, world Jewish organizations will have to take on the immense job of providing for Europe's displaced Jews; and of working to maintain their self-respect, so as to avoid moral and mental demoralization, and to keep up their whole economic structure so that they will not become an economic drain, but an asset, in whatever country they may go. Through the help that the ORT is giving, and the relief it is bringing in this way, Mr. Hayes said that not only the Europeans, but everybody, will be grateful.

Major Eisenhardt, who is Danish, and has been in Canada for ten years, made mention of "the great demand for crafts and arts", and said that "the more the young people can be taught that, the better for the country". Before he sat down, he smiled boyishly, and asked that "you establish an ORT school in my native country, Denmark." He got an extra burst of applause for this, and both he and the audience looked disappointed when it was announced later that Denmark was a country of "such good providers" that it didn't need an ORT school; not now, anyway.

Following the two main speakers, Mrs. Dolowitz and Mr. Levine, Mr. Workman spoke briefly, mostly about the assistance given to UNRRA through its purchase of ORT tools.

Mrs. Dolowitz was very chic in a grey dress, with pink flowers down the left side of the bodice and skirt, and with embroidery on the sleeves; a green feather hat and matching veil; and pearl earrings and necklace. She told the Review that she had been president of the American Women's ORT for ten years and is now vice-president and chairman of program. There are nearly fifty women's chapters throughout the United States, with headquarters at 212 Fifth Avenue, New York, and Mrs. Dolowitz was trying to organize a nucleus of women's chapters in Canada while she was here.

Mrs. Dolowitz has a daughter, Grace, who is a graduate of Bryn Mawr, and is now teaching at Wheaton College, in Massachusetts, after working with the Office of Strategic Services during the war. Her daughter can speak French, German, and Italian, and was overseas for two and a half years. Her son, Captain David Dolowitz, U.S. Army Medical Corps, was in the South Pacific with the Johns Hopkins Hospital Unit, and has two children. This makes his mother one of America's very young grandmothers.

When interviewed, Mrs. Dolowitz said that the women's chapters undertook a project of a vocational training campaign for one hundred war orphans, both boys and girls. It costs $300 per year to train a child in one of the ORT centres in France, Poland, or Switzerland. The money provides partial maintenance, and vocational training for the year. If the child is over sixteen, the training fee lasts for a life's work, and if he is under that age, the money will support him for the year. The money has been sent over, and the women are already being rewarded with pictures and letters from the children they have "adopted" in this way. Speaking of this from the platform with much assurance, Mrs. Dubowitz was confident over the fact that the women will soon begin working to provide for the need the thousand children!

On the wall of ORT headquarters in Paris, when she and her husband visited there in 1937, was a map with colored pins showing the locations of ORT schools throughout Europe, and the agents said that there were over six hundred. She described the fine textile-work, the shoes, with open toes, even then; and textile-work and fine embroidery by girls from numerous European countries, worked in their traditional, characteristic fashions. There were electric stoves, precision tools, and bathroom fixtures, which she mentioned as examples of work done by boys and young men.

Mrs. Dubowitz gave two instances from personal histories of some of the ORT scholar children, sketching briefly the stories, similar in escape, and terror, and finally, relief, re-education, and re-training. One girl had escaped from Poland, to France, and then to Switzerland, where she is now at an ORT school, learning dressmaking. Her teachers say she is precocious, and that she is considered one of their best pupils. The other girl escaped with her mother from Brussels after her father and brother had been deported from there. Her mother became blind, and the girl entered a Swiss ORT school, to learn dressmaking. She is now in a sanitorium, not too ill to learn, but she is expected to be well soon, and to go back to school to learn to support herself and her mother.

Mrs. Dubowitz gave an organizational trips all over the United States, and lengthingly calls herself a travelling saleswoman.

Mr. Levine, the other speaker from New York, who is a lawyer was prompted at the opening of the school three years ago during the background story of the war, Mr.

Loving cups and cables and letters from ORT representatives from all over the world. One of them gave a history of Shanghai Jews whom the Japanese had interned, in a ghetto, and most of whom are still there, being too poor to get out. "The J.D.C.'s Manuel Siegel does his best, but he can barely keep people from starving," Mr. Levine said. The Jews there need sewing and knitting machines, trucks and tools, to help them establish themselves. Up to the Japanese occupation, he said, anti-Semitism did not exist there.

Mr. Levine referred, too, to the Harrison Report, made by former United States Immigration Commissioner Earl G. Harrison, to President Truman, who sent him to Europe last July, to investigate the condition of displaced refugees, mostly Jews. He quoted from it mention about Jews who are waiting in camps, and for whom no effort toward rehabilitation had been undertaken at the time. Beyond knowing that they were not to be gassed, the change in their way of life was not much for the better, and so they ask "what liberation means".

In Frankfurt On-The-Main, with the Joint Distribution Committee and the British Relief Commission, the ORT presented a completed plan to UNRRA to train 100,000 Jewish refugees. With the completion of the agreement, which is to help mitigate the unrelieved dreariness of doing nothing, Jewish refugees in the United States and British zones in Germany will be trained to earn their living. In Belgium and Yugoslavia, courses have already been established.

The most imperative need now, said Mr. Levine, is for qualified teachers and improved instruments. He then announced that Mr. Greenman, the executive director here, was asked to come and work at these European trades schools. The audience broke into unanimous, appreciative applause, while Mr. Greenman, who will be leaving shortly, just looked modest and slightly shocked.

As Mr. Levine put it, "these people need to learn to learn," and Mr. Greenman's services were asked for, not only because he is a master hand experimentist, but also because he speaks the various necessary languages.

Mainly all the questions stressed the dignity of people making their own living, and the needs of people being self-supporting, as well as the value in teaching finely crafted work. In the ORT schools, work for rehabilitation is carried on, not only through teaching, but also by producing the articles for work and learning.

The story behind an ORT tool talk of the supplies sent to Europe's displaced Jews. An ORT tool itself represents the help these people get toward realizing what freedom really means in terms of the ability to make a new life for themselves by the work of their hands.

My Favorite Gold-Brick

By Norman Goldberg, of Sacramento, California, U.S. Army Chaplain

Ginsburg had a system and it worked. He used to go on sick call, day after day, with the expectation that an exasperated doctor would send him to the hospital. That he did, after a week of daily consultations. Ginsburg would tell the doctor that he had pains and the doctor discovered for himself that the pains travelled from East to West and South to North across Ginsburg's torso. Every day his pain lodged in a new area.

Rabbi Norman Goldberg is a Chaplain in the U. S. Army on leave from his congregation in Sacramento, Cal. He is widely known among his colleagues for his articles, which have a characteristically droll and ironic twist.
—Editor.

You would not judge Ginsburg to be the frail or invalid type. He was a husky young fellow, five feet ten inches in height, heavy-set and with a round, full face. He was, as they say, "the picture of health." He had bright blue eyes that lighted up his countenance in an engaging smile. Add to this the fact that Ginsburg was soft spoken and of an amiable disposition, and you will understand why he became my favorite Gold-Brick.

The average Gold-Bricker is a surly fellow, sullen, morose. He makes a business of Gold-Bricking. He develops a suspicious attitude toward all non-coms and officers; he is likely to be wary and cunning in his relations with those who try to get a little work out of him. One may take it for granted that the G.B.'s army performance is a continuation of his civilian routine. Dodging work is an old story for the experienced G.B.

Ginsburg was different. When I questioned him I learned that he had been a successful and (in his own words) hard-working business man in civilian life. Yet his company commander had told me, when I questioned him, if Ginsburg was not a Gold-Brick he had never seen one. "Has the Captain ever spoken to the men about his G.B. predilection?" I asked.

"No," he answered, "not directly, but the sergeant has, not once but many times." The boy was not a promising prospect for effective military service. The doctor verified this diagnosis when I called at the hospital to see the "patient". "What's wrong with him?" I asked of Captain W. "Blest me mate," he answered. "They took his temperature and the wrong way and they said—After waiting in the army. I'm through with him. Tomorrow, he gets the buttermilk and dry toast diet treatment and after that—back to his outfit. This is not a medical case, Chaplain," he emphasized. "This is one for you, and you are welcome to it."

I walked over to Ginsburg's bed and read the cryptic diagnosis on the tag, "Gold-Brick-Chronic." . . . "What's wrong with you, my boy?" I asked, expecting to hear a recital of the patient's fancied symptoms. To my surprise, Goldburg sat up, smiled and replied, "You're the Chaplain, aren't you?" Without waiting for my affirmative answer, he continued, "Nothing's the matter with me. I'm a Gold-Bricker; but to tell the truth, I'm getting sick and tired of it."

"This is the first time I ever heard a man admit it," I replied, somewhat taken aback. "I'm not going to argue the point with you. That's what it says, here on the tag: that's what the doctor says: that's what your C.O. told me. I'm convinced, but I'm puzzled. Now tell me, what's it all about?"

Ginsburg told me, first about his work and activities in civil life, and then, in some detail, the reasons for his strange behaviour in the army. Let me relate that part of his story, as I recollect it.

"I don't want to go overseas, Chaplain," he said, emphasizing every word. "You're surprised to hear me admit it, aren't you? Maybe, you think, I've just got a bad case of "gang-plank" fever. All right, I'll be frank with you and tell you, right off the bat, that's what I got and I got it bad. But with me it's the real thing. I'm not afraid to go to a battle zone, no, and I'm not scared of Jap bullets or bombs or anything like that. I can take care of myself, never worry. What I'm afraid of is sea-sickness . . . I once took the night boat from New York to Boston and what I went through shouldn't happen to a dog. I didn't have ordinary sea-sickness the way most people get it, for three or four hours. I had it all the way in to Boston and for two days afterwards. I swayed back and forth like a drunken sailor from Scully Square to the Copley-Plaza." He swayed a little in the bed, to demonstrate.

"But wait a minute," he continued, "that isn't all. I got inveigled into a Sunday excursion deal on the Hudson River a couple of years later. My brother Frank tells me this is different. No high waves, no rocking, no tossing. It's like riding on the Fifth Avenue bus. Says he! Believe me, Chaplain, I am not exaggerating when I say I was on my back the whole trip except when I was leaning over the rail. Ah, just the thought of it makes me sea-sick. Tell me, am I turning green?"

To my consternation, Ginsburg then and there proceeded to give a demonstration of the power of mind over matter. His face slowly drained of color; his eyes began to roll, à la Eddie Cantor, and he called weakly, "Nurse, nurse, a glass of water." The nurse brought the water.

"Don't excite yourself, Ginsburg," I said, trying to calm him. "Let's not talk about it anymore." I was beginning to feel giddy myself.

In a few minutes Ginsburg had recovered. The color came back into his cheeks. His eyes regained their natural sparkle and stopped rolling in their sockets. He continued as follows: "Well, sir, you can imagine how I feel about going to Australia or New Zealand or India. All I have to do is put my mind on it, especially in the morning at sick call, and I get a legitimate excuse to fall out. This is the kind of a story you can't tell the doctor and you certainly can't tell the C.O., but it's true. I got gang-plank fever, that's all I got to say. A long ocean voyage will finish me; so I'm making a bid for dry land. If I wanted to sail the seven seas I'd have joined the Navy."

That was Ginsburg's story, and it convinced me that he was not to be judged by the ordinary G.B. standard. He was different. "You say you are tired of this Gold Brick business," I prompted. "What do you mean?"

"I mean what I say. I hate myself for this sick deal every morning. I'm not fooling the doctor. I can't even work up a first class symptom. I'm too healthy, and I'm strong as an ox. . . . Besides, I've got a terrific appetite and I don't go for this invalid diet. . . . Furthermore, I get nervous when they stick needles in me. I'm too active to lie quietly in bed. I tell you, Chaplain, I'm fed up with it and I want to go back to work."

I left the patient a moment later and presented myself to the Captain in the personnel section. "Where is code 191919 going?" I asked him. "Not far," he answered. "Alaska. They leave by train for the Northwest in two weeks. Most of them are going to drive in army vehicles up the new Alaska highway." I was jubilant. Here was the solution to Ginsburg's problem. I hurried back to the hospital and reported to the "patient". "Don't ask me for the details, but your outfit is scheduled to travel by rail and by automobile. How does that suit you?"

Ginsburg was out of bed in one bound. "Let me out of here!" he begged the doctor. "There's nothing wrong with me." The next day he was released. I called his C.O. on the phone and told him to keep an eye on the "new" Ginsburg. When I met the C.O. later in the week he asked me. "What's come over the man? He has rehabilitated himself. Even the sergeant says he's a changed man" . . . "He's got gang-plank fever," I answered; to which he replied, "I don't get it, but if that's it, we could use a little more of the same."

The post-script to the story was written by Ginsburg himself. I received a letter from Alaska several months after the outfit had

COMMENTARIES

Memorable were the questions put by students to the religious teachers. They wanted moral and ethical guidance in their fight for the just society. For me, it was most inspiring to hear a Christian youth denounce publicly those secret letter fraternities which exclude a student just because he happens to be a Jew. Quota systems regarding race or religious groupings in colleges were openly discussed and denounced.

The students rightly want the teachings of church and synagogue to be "fleshed", to be translated into daily living and striving.

In one of our addresses we pleaded that brotherhood has now its last chance and a good chance, provided church and synagogue help people to face the great hazards and hopes of humanity. Christians and Jews in this post-war era must guard against the possibility of peace being sabotaged. Adherents of synagogue and church must now fight the rising hate movements and unemployment. In particular, must we become more sympathetic to the suffering peoples of the world. We in the Americas are separated psychologically from those who directly sacrificed and suffered and died in the struggle against the Nazi barbarians. We must give of our food and clothing freely to the war victims of Europe and Asia.

The menace of suspicion among the Allies must also be fought if there be brotherhood in the Americas or in the world.

Salute to the students of the University of Vermont! Salute to the distinguished president of this fine institution of learning, Dr. John Millis and to the faculty, in particular Professor Raymond Hall, and others, who made the Life and Religion Parley such a significant and meaningful cultural project proving the dynamics of American democracy and the hope for world redemption through ethical striving.

left the Port of Embarkation. The envelope told half the story. I read in the upper left hand corner: "Return to Corporal Joseph Grunberg, c/o Postmaster, A.P.O. X., Seattle, Wash." I opened the letter and read, "Dear Captain: I trust you have not forgotten the story of the story-teller that day at the station hospital. I knew it must have sounded funny, but sure enough, I am still a victim of 'gang-plank' fever. However, I am not worried about it any more. I discovered a new way to travel and I don't expect to make a sea voyage, despite what a fortune teller once told me. It may surprise you to learn that I am at home in the air like a duck in the water. This is how I found my way to peace of mind:

"One day, I was persuaded to go up in an army transport. I confess, I was shivering in my boots. We went zooming up and up, we hit the bumps, the pilot did a few funny turns. Some of the boys, in a plane for the first time, got plane sick. I helped take care of them. (By the way, they turned a beautiful shade of green.) But, strangely enough, it didn't bother me. Then and there, I made a resolution. This was for me, I told myself, so when we landed I put in immediately for transfer to the air corps. I passed the examinations and am now waiting for the plane which will take me to one of the big fields in the States for training as a pilot. . . . After that, Tokio here I come!" — Jos. Grunberg, ex-G.I.

Lieut.-gen. Joseph, N.Y. City's new commissioner, is a grandson of the late Rabbi Jacob Joseph, who in 1888 became Chief Rabbi of the Orthodox congregation of N.Y. City, the only math ever to hold that title. He founded the Ramaz Rabbi Jacob Joseph Yeshiva on the lower East Side.

10,000 POLISH JEWS TO LEAVE RUSSIA

One hundred thousand of the estimated 2,000,000 Jews who fled to the Soviet Union at the start of the war will remain shortly to their homeland under an agreement with Moscow, according to an announcement by Wladyslaw Raczkiewicz, Polish Minister of the British Provisional Government, released in New York through the British Home Agency.

M. Raczkiewicz, who arrived in Washington for a short visit, conferred before the Hill for Wheat Pilsen with officials of the American Federation of Polish Jews at the Polish Consulate, 1441 Fifty-seventh Street.

M. Raczkiewicz stressed in the statement that repatriation of the Soviet-exile Polish Jews has been urged on governments-in-exile by members of their own race who have already returned to Poland from Siberia and Central Asia. Many of the Polish Jews, he said, have already left the Soviet Union and are now in Persia, Palestine, India and Africa.

CLASS IN COOKERY

MARBLE CAKE

three-quarters cup butter
two cups sugar four eggs
one cup milk
four teaspoons baking powder
three cups cake flour
one-quarter pound grated chocolate one teaspoon cinnamon
one-half teaspoon cloves
one-half teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter, add sugar. Add eggs, one at a time, beating after each addition. Add flour, sifted with baking powder, alternately with the milk, and beat until smooth. Put one-third of the dough into another bowl, and mix in chocolate, spices and flavoring. Place alternate layers of white and chocolate mixture into a greased tube-pan, and stir it once around to mix the layers somewhat. Bake for forty-five minutes in a three hundred and fifty degree oven.

Mrs. I. Sandys,
4011 Hutchison Street, Montreal.

YEAST COFFEE CAKE

one pint milk (warm)
one cup sugar
two eggs
one-half pound butter
one-half teaspoon vanilla
two cakes yeast
seven cups flour (approximately) one-half teaspoon salt

Cream the sugar and butter, and add eggs, yeast which has been crumbled, flavouring, salt, and warm milk. Stir well, adding enough bread flour to make a dough not quite as firm as that used for bread. Let rise until very light, and roll out quite thinly. This may be spread with soft butter, nuts, cinnamon, and brown sugar. Roll up like strudel, and slice when cold. Place in a buttered pan, and let rise again. Bake about thirty minutes in a fairly hot oven. Half this recipe may be used if desired.

Mrs. Jay I. English,
143 Russholme Road, Toronto.

The recipe for Orange Cake, in last week's issue of the Review, given in by Mrs. Samuel Roth, 595 Bloomfield Avenue, Montreal, should have listed one cup of sugar among the ingredients.

HARRISON-BEIT

The marriage of Florance Louise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Beit, of New London, Conn., to Sydney S. Harrison, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Oberman, Trans Island Avenue, took place in the main ballroom of the Savoy-Plaza in New York, on Sunday, October 14, at half-past six o'clock, Dr. I. Newman, of New York, officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a long white satin princess gown, trimmed with heirloom lace, one hundred and twenty-five years old. It had long sleeves, pointed at the wrists, a high neck-line, long bodice, and a full, wide skirt, draped into a four-yard train. She had a wreath of orange blossoms, worn by her mother at her wedding, caught to a tulle veil, finger-tip-length in front, and draping to floor-length in back. She carried a Bible, with white orchids and stephanotis. Miss Jeanne Beit, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, wearing a long dress in American Beauty red, cut with an off-the-shoulder neckline, long sleeves pointed at the wrists, and a bustle back. She carried an old-fashioned nosegay. Samuel H. Schecter, of Montreal, was best man. Around the canopy there was an arbor of palms, Calla lilies, and white chrysanthemums and pom-poms. Wedding music was played by an orchestra. Mrs. Beit, mother of the bride, received in a long gown of cyclamen-colored crepe, with gold sequin trimming, and yellow orchids in her hair. Mrs. Oberman, the groom's mother, received also, in a long gown of light blue crepe, with a royal blue hat, and a bouquet of red roses. The bridal couple left for Mexico City, the bride travelling in a mulberry-red suit, with opossum trimming, and a matching red hair-headdress. They are living in Montreal. Out-of-town guests, from Montreal, were: Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Barnett, Mr. and Mrs. Bert. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Solomon, Mrs. P. Stettiner, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Allen, Mr. and Mrs. M. # U.S. Bomber Group "Adopts" Little Orphan

A beautiful brunette whose shy smile enchants all who see her, the unanimous pin-up girl of the whole 344th Bombardment Group in Belgium, Yvonne Sytner has 2,500 loving "daddies" and there's not a bit of jealousy among them.

Yvonne is eleven years old and has been "adopted" by a whole unit of American officers and men who lost their hearts to the little Jewish orphan they saw while attending the opening of a new home established by the Joint Distribution Committee for homeless children and orphans in Belgium.

So interested in the J.D.C. work were the visitors that they decided to "adopt" a child and make financial arrangements for her care and education. Yvonne, a native of Antwerp whose parents had been deported long ago for "political activity", was unanimously chosen as the "daughter of the regiment." Her sweetness and charm so captivated the bomber group that she was invited to spend a month on the field in the care of the Red Cross woman on the base. When the schools reopened in Brussels, Yvonne returned to the J.D.C. home where she now lives.

To insure that she would receive a good education, the Yvonne Adoption Fund was established to raise 250,000 francs, approximately 100 francs per man. Crumpled one, five and ten franc notes were placed in special containers in the mess and recreation halls. Contributions of 100 francs or more were rewarded with a special "Daddy" card and before long, the committee, headed by Sgt. George W. Friedman, of Los Angeles, presented the J.D.C. representatives in Brussels with their check for $5,000.

Since the deportation of her parents, Yvonne had lived with one unwilling family after another. Eventually she was taken to the J.D.C. home, where kind treatment and care restored her to health of body and spirit.

Only about 3,000 Jewish children have survived in Belgium. Of these, the J.D.C. supports some 1,265 in J.D.C. institutions and in private homes. At present, the J.D.C. has a total of seven children's homes which are caring for over three hundred children, and two more buildings are being prepared to house Jewish orphans who are now in other institutions but under supervision from Jewish welfare workers.

A happy postscript to the Yvonne Sytner case occurred late in September when she was traced by relatives in the United States who are trying to bring her to America where they can adopt her. The Bomber Group had indicated that, should Yvonne leave Belgium, the funds they had raised for her were to be placed in a scholarship fund to be used at the discretion of the J.D.C. committee for other children like Yvonne, one of the hundreds helped by the J.D.C.

Famous Song Writer, Edwards Discovered Other Stars

Gus Edwards, veteran song writer, actor and movie director, died in Holywood, Cal., of a heart attack. His age was 66.

He had been in motion pictures since 1928 and was on the New York stage for thirty years. Among the stars he helped discover and develop were Eddie Cantor, Georgie Jessel and Mae Murray.

In the early years of this century a gag that was current on Broadway and in the whistle stops went something like this:

"Pull in your kids—here comes Gus Edwards!"

Gus Edwards was a song writer and an actor but he was best known as the No. 1 talent scout of the days when vaudeville, instead of being dead, was just coming into its respectable own.

The songs he wrote were as famous in their day as those who sang them. Some of the best-remembered are:

"By the Light of the Silvery Moon", "Good-bye, Little Girl, Good-bye", "Tammany", "School-days", "Wonderful", "Every Day Is Mother's Day for Me", "Orange Blossom Time", "When the Roses Bloom Again" and "I'm Gonna Meet Minnie Tonight."

The son of Morris and Johanna Simon, he was born on Aug. 18, 1881, according to one source, and in 1878, according to another. He was in his 'teens when his parents brought him to the U.S. They settled in Brooklyn, where he went to work as a tobacco stripper.

Within a short time of his arrival he began singing tunes in Johnny Palmer's Gayety Saloon in Brooklyn when he was not attending night school, which was seldom. There in 1896, he was heard by James Hyde of Hyde & Behman, vaudeville managers. Hyde hired him and a few other kids, dressed them like Horatio Alger newsboys, and gave them a spot in vaudeville.

During the Spanish-American War Gus Edwards was sent to a camp to take the soldiers' mind off the bad beef. There he met Will Cobb, a lyric writer. The two teamed up and for years were known by the nicknames "Words" and "Music".

Their first song, "I Can't Tell Why I Love You" was soon being played on all the squeaky talking machines of the day; their second composition, "When the Roses Bloom Again Beside the River", earned for them the largest advance royalty ever paid up to then by a music publishing firm.

Soon Gus Edwards was one of the best-known figures in that short block of converted private dwellings on Twenty-eighth Street between Broadway and Sixth Avenue—the original Tin Pan Alley.

He founded his own publishing house and became the busiest song plugger in the business. In 1905 he put on his first typical Gus Edwards show. The next year Arthur Hammerstein engaged him to open the roof garden atop the huge theatre building he had just erected "uptown", in Longacre Square, as Times Square was then called. As a star, he hired a comparatively unknown girl whom he had spotted at the Orpheum Theatre in Brooklyn. Her name was Elsie Janis. The production was called "Under the Wisteria."

His next production was "The Blonde Typewriter", with Lillian Walker, Mae Murray and Ruby Norton as the "typewriters".

While one show was in rehearsal a woman who said she was a sister of Al Sheean sought a job for two of her four sons. One of them, Julius, a dour-faced youngster with a sense of humor, turned out to be Groucho Marx.

While presenting this act at Atlantic City he spotted Eddie Cantor, borrowed him for an act and later hired him to appear in "Kid Kabaret." Jessel and Walter Winchell also were in the cast of "Kid Kabaret."

"Tammany", "In My Merry Oldsmobile", "Don't Cry, Little Girl, Don't Cry", and "Way Down Yonder in the Cornfield" were some of the hits he wrote and which were sung in his shows.

He wrote for Anna Held the famous song, "I Just Can't Make My Eyes Behave".

In 1912 he staged and appeared in Gus Edwards' Song Review. Two youngsters made their debut in this show — Herman Timberg and Georgie Price, the latter rising from his seat in the orchestra to sing "By the Light of the Silvery Moon".

In 1929 Edwards went to Hollywood and appeared in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions "The Doll Shop" and "The Song Writers Revue".

The next year he returned to Broadway and appeared at the Palace Theatre with another new group of players. Among them were Ray Bolger, the eccentric dancer; Hildegarde, the singer, and Priscilla, Rosemary and Lola Lane. His last show was "Ritz Carlton Nights," a flop. But it had a potential star—Eleanor Powell.

Gus Edwards married Lillian Boulanger. They celebrated their thirty-fifth wedding anniversary on Dec. 1, 1940. In that year a motion picture was based on his life. It was "The Star Maker".

Dean Harry J. Carmen, of Columbia, recommended that the student body should come "from the families of recent immigrants and from families who have lived here for generations," as "only by such an intermingling of backgrounds can each student learn the composite character of the country and each be stimulated to give the best that he represents."

A transport of 789 Jewish immigrants, including 300 children, the last group to be admitted under the White Paper, arrived in Palestine on Nov. 8, aboard a British war ship from Italy. Their immigration certificates came direct from the Palestine Government, since the Jewish Agency refused to accept any more certificates issued under the White Paper.

IT'S AS OLD AS ITS ARTERIES!
● The life-carrying arteries of a building are its electric wires. The size and number of wires determine the amount of electric power that may be used at any one time. As electrical devices multiply, and new uses call for increasing quantities of electricity, any building, regardless of when it was built, is only as young as the ability of its arteries to carry the load.
A home that is wired only for lights and small appliances must be rewired before it can provide such comforts as an electric range and water-heater. If not wired for all requirements, it is "old" until it is rewired to carry modern loads, with plenty of outlets and switches. The economical time to wire properly is when a place is being built or remodeled.
A proper standard of wiring in an office or factory will advantageously affect production and profit. Employees do better work with less fatigue when lighting levels are of approved standards. Adequate wiring also provides for modern electrical equipment.
Your Hydro is planning to provide you with the electricity you will need for peacetime prosperity and comfort. Be sure that you plan also to enjoy these benefits in full, through adequate wiring. Your Hydro will be glad to give you information about wiring.

Noted Publisher Dies In Exile

Dr. Franz Ullstein, one of the leading newspaper and book publishers of Germany and Europe before the Nazi regime, died in Harlem Hospital after being injured in a traffic accident at Columbus Avenue and Seventy-ninth Street, New York. He had been living in retirement since 1941 at 225 East Seventy-ninth Street.

When the Nazis rose to power and confiscated the Ullstein publishing concern in 1934, Dr. Ullstein fled to Switzerland and then to France, England and Brazil. He came to the U.S. in 1941.

Dr. Ullstein made his first trip to the United States in 1912 to study the American press. In an interview at that time he indicated that his most popular newspaper, the Berliner Zeitung am Mittag, had gained its success largely because it was patterned, more than any other journal in the Reich, after American models.

"German editors," said Dr. Ullstein, "are beginning to realize that a newspaper's popularity and influence are established by the reading public and not by the editor's or publisher's policy. The change which we must effect consists in separating altogether the editorial and news columns".

The Hitler Government took actual control of the Ullstein interests in 1933, when 56 per cent of the voting stock was seized. Outside of the Nazis' desire to control the German press, the seizure apparently also was motivated by the Ullstein family's adherence to the Jewish faith. In addition, the chairman of the Reich Press Chamber, a Herr Amann, was a director of a rival publishing house.

The Ullstein company was started by Leopold Ullstein, father of Franz, and his four brothers. Franz, who was born in Berlin, entered the business in 1892 after studying at the Universities of Berlin, Heidelberg and Freiburg.

Dr. Ullstein was credited with a large part of the growth to a business worth several million dollars. It developed from a concern publishing one weekly of small circulation into an influential house, the largest in Germany producing four daily newspapers, various illustrated weeklies and many low-cost books.

According to the police, a Seventy-ninth Street crosstown bus driven by Antonio Ferraro of 769 Washington Street, was turning right from Columbus Avenue into its westbound run on Seventy-ninth Street when Dr. Ullstein walked into the bus. The retired publisher, was was 77 years old, was treated there and then taken to Harlem Hospital, where he died.

He leaves a brother, Rudolf, now in London; a son, Kurt, in Brazil; and a daughter, Elizabeth, in New York.

A THOROUGHLY COMPETENT PROSPECT...

This man is a typical Paratrooper, graduate of a school that has fitted him both mentally and physically to meet any emergency. Exceptionally equipped, he is ready now to step back into civilian life.

His training was long and arduous. During it he learned many skills readily adaptable to the needs of a peacetime job. Alertness and efficiency were acquired in the stress of combat with life itself depending on his possession of both.

Now he is polishing up at an Army Vocational School preparing to present himself for civilian employ as a thoroughly competent prospect for whatever career he elects to follow.
